

Tick tock Charlie's choc mystery unravelled

Finally wonka's last golden ticket has been found by a young, ordinary boy named Charlie bucket. Before that miracle happened bucket was just an ordinary boy living in a tiny house with a huge hole in the roof, Charlie sleeps on an uneven floor whilst his poorly grandparents sleep in one big comfy bed.

Charlie found his lucky ticket in the local corner shop down the road! Surprisingly the shop keeper shouted "IT'S THE GOLDEN TICKET! THE KID FOUND IT! IN MY SHOP!" unfortunately other shoppers tried to buy Charlie out, but Charlie ignored the offers and ran straight home to tell his wonder- full family the great news.

Excitedly, storming through the door Charlie recounted the extraordinary events of the previous hours. He told his aging grandparents and loving parents Mrs

Bucket (age 42) and Mr Bucket an unemployed factory worker (age 43) how he found his 50p hidden in the freezing cold` snow and desperate for food (chocolate particularly) he decided to use his lucky coin to buy a scrumptious treat for himself. The fabulous news spread across the damp, cold house in seconds! Everybody was so happy for Charlie especially Grandpa Joe, because e got out of bed and shouted "YIPPEEE" whilst dancing around the room!

Charlie felt so lucky but he announced that people from the shop offered him some descent amount of money and that they needed the money more than the trip! Will Charlie take down the offer or will he live the dream?

Despite the fact that Charlie is poor, Bucket made his decision and he is going to live the dream with Grandpa Joe! Charlie is very excited but not as excited as Grandpa Joe.

Unfortunately all the tickets have been found so the search is finally over. The winner is going to wonka's awesome factory. Who will win the prize? What is it?
