

last gold last found

Finally the last golden ticket has been claimed! The lucky winner was a young boy called Charlie Bucket, a 10 year old boy who lives in a small house in London. Unlike the other winners Charlie kind and thoughtful even though he has no money. Yesterday, lucky Bucket found some money in the street and bought a Wonka bar at his local news agent.

The first golden ticket was found by August Gloop, a greedy young boy from Germany. Secondly, a selfish young girl from Buckinghamshire found the next ticket because her dad owned a factory and used his workers to unwrap chocolate bars. Next Violet Beauregard, a gum chewing champion from the USA found the golden ticket by switching from chewing gum to eating chocolate bars. After Violet came Mike Teevee who is from Georgia. He is addicted to playing video games and was not even interested in winning a visit to Wonka's factory because he doesn't even like chocolate.

Charlie's family are very poor. His grandparents all sleep in the same bed and haven't been out of bed for 40 years.

Recently Charlie's dad lost his job at the toothpaste factory because machinery took over so now no one in the family works. The poor boy lives in a house which is in a terrible state as the roof is falling in. Their meals are far from perfect, for breakfast they eat only stale bread, for lunch they eat half a potato and finally for dinner they eat cabbage soup.

Charlie's first chance at winning came on his birthday when his parents bought him a Wonka chocolate bar however he did not find a golden ticket that time. Next his grandpa Joe gave him the last of his money to buy another chocolate bar but he had no luck that time either. Gloomily Charlie was walking down the street, suddenly he found 50p covered in snow on the pavement. Dashing into the shop he picked up a Wonka bar and paid the shopkeeper. He tore the wrapper open and saw the glimmering, gold ticket shining in his face!

Shocked, Charlie stared at the ticket in his hand. "I'll give you £1000 and a new bicycle for that ticket!" a woman yelled at Charlie. It is reported that the shopkeeper told Charlie to run straight home and not let anyone buy the ticket. Sprinting, Charlie rushed rapidly home. He burst through his tiny front door and shouted "I've won, I've found the last golden ticket!" Grandpa Joe, who had not been out of bed for 40 years, rapidly leapt out and started dancing in the middle of the room. "Yippee!" he shouted loudly.

The search is over. All 5 winners have now been found and will visit the factory on 1st February at 8.30am. Who will be Wonka's lucky winner and what is the secret prize?

Reported by Fin, Dan and Harry

