

Cheerful Chocolate Charlie

was berried in the snow. Charlie carefully pulled the 50 pence out from beneath the snow, then he sprinted to bobs corner shop! The door flung open to find bob at the counter counting the money money to see how much money he had earnt. When Charlie clamed his chocolate bar he suddenly ripped the wrapper in half to reveal the last golden ticket! A lady in the shop said to Charlie that she would give him 500 pounds for the golden ticket! But Charlie took NO for an answer, so he sprinted home to tell his family the out standing news!

Slam! Charlie carelessly opened the door coursing more of the roof to fall down, Charlie was bursting out with news. Shockingly, everyone was silent the room was breathless. Grandpa Joe cleaned his glasses to look closer at the glistening golden tick when he suddenly shouted yippee! Then he started to dance, after his grandpa celebrated Charlie gave the ticket to his parents and told then to read it out loud. So they began.

So the last golden ticket has been found and the competition is closed. However there is still one more competition who out of the five children will win wonkas last golden ticket? Who do you want to win?

wouldn't say house I would say two rooms. Charlie's grandparents the four of them (Grandpa Joe, grandma Josephine, grandpa George and grandma Georgina.) all share the same small old double bed while Charlie, his mom and dad share the other room on rugged mattresses on the damp lock sided floor boards.

Charlie had more than one attempted to find the life changing ticket . His first attempt was on his existing birthday when is parents handed him a rectangular surprise! Suddenly Charlie rapidly unwrapped it to find a wonkas chocolate fudge mellow delight. He found nothing but chocolate. His second attempt was when his grandpa joe slide out a small brown piece of material from underneath his rugged pillow inside the material was some dirty money. finally his third attempt was When he was calmly strolling around the neighbourhood when out of no where, a 50 pence coin

An epic win! Just three hours ago Charlie bucket a ten year old boy, was walking around the neighbourhood when he found fifty pence lying in the snow, after that Charlie brought a wonkas fudge mellow delight at bob's corner shop. Inside the paper sealed wrapper was wonkas last glistening golden ticket. Slowly Charlie pulled out the opportunity to visit wonkas chocolate factory! Charlie leaped up in the air causing a magazine to fall off the shelf, and screamed "the last golden ticket its mine!" Charlie sprinted back home to tell his loving but poor family the breath taking news!

Frantically, Charlie busted through the door, shouting "MOM DAD! THE LAST GOLDEN TICKET ITS MINE!" Silence was held! Grandpa looked closer, then jumped out of bed while dancing then he shouted "Yippee!" Sadly Charlie replied "NO! were NOT going a lady offered me £500 for the ticket I bet someone else would pay more. We need the money more than the ticket" If I was Charlie I would have the ticket, would you?

Sadly Charlie and his family are very poor. They live in a a falling down well I
