

Charlie goes gold

As Willy Wonka's competition comes to an end, Charlie a poor young lonely London boy found the last golden winning ticket.

Only hours ago Charlie Bucket was walking down an alleyway when he found a 10 dollar bill, which was poking out of the snow. This was his last chance, he was wishing that he could win the golden ticket.

Charlie a 12 year old poor lonely, child lives in a shed with 6 other people all in 1 crammed bed. Could this be his life changing chance? It's been his dream to be noticed for once in his life.

Running to the shop on the corner of his street in London, suddenly, the cold lonely boy who found the last golden ticket rapidly sprinted towards his wooden rusty home (shed), guarding his precious ticket saying no to every offer of money. Charlie was just thinking of the huge factory. Shouting at the top of his voice Charlie screamed, Mother! Mother! I've got the fifth golden ticket here in my hands."

Charlie's parents reported that grandpa

Joe jumped out of bed and started dancing around the room.

Charlie and the 4 other people with tickets will be heading to the chocolate factory at 10 am tomorrow. Who is going to win the grand prize?
