

Kid called Charlie gets golden ticket finale

Just yesterday, local boy named Charlie Bucket really shook it when he found the last golden ticket in a corner store. Nobody really knows how he won it; most people think that he was just lucky. He won this the day before the event on the 31st of January. Earlier on the same day he bought a Wonka bar yet did not win the event. As a result of finding money in the street it consequently helped him win a trip to a legendary chocolate factory.

Charlie Bucket is the only son, being the age of 12, of Mister and Misses Bucket. It is actually quite surprising (very surprising in fact) that he won the golden ticket due to the fact he is very poor and also because as we all know, many, many children entered Willy Wonka's golden ticket challenge. He lives in a very cramped, one-bed, roomed house in London, on top of a hill, living with his four elderly grandparents, who all share one bed, Charlie never complains despite the lack of space. Only recently, Charlie's father lost his job at the toothpaste and toothbrush factory, which was a rather huge disappointment due to the fact that unfortunately Charlie's mother does not have a job, either. Therefore they have a very, very limited quantity of money, and due to that, it was a sensation that he found the last golden ticket.

Slowly, the poor boy walked across the crowded, damp street, eventually finding a £10 note, despite it being covered with dirt. Rushing to the small corner store, Charlie felt his body gush with anticipation, clutching the money in his hand as if his life depended on it. Then Charlie, whilst being in the shop, bought a lip-smacking chewy delight (Wonka bar) however, when he opened it, out came a golden ticket! The shopkeeper must have watched that because the next thing you know he exclaimed this: "A GOLDEN TICKET IN MY STORE! MY STORE!?! Don't offer that golden ticket to anyone boy! Run home and don't look back!" Charlie decided to take his advice despite the fact of people trying to make him sell it.

After his epic run across to his diminutive house, he showed his astounding golden ticket to his parents. Basically, after he showed his grandpa, he had this to say about it...YIPPEE! (Starts dancing). HALIJUHA! PRAISE THE LORD! CRIPES! YIPPEE!!

The last golden ticket has been found. Sorry, all you other kids out there. The winners (as we've been told) are the following: Augustus Gloop, Veruca Salt, Violet Beauregard, Mike Teevee and Charlie Bucket. Each of them will take one legal guardian/parent on an once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Finally-good luck to everyone who somehow won.
