

MIDAS CHARLIE TURNS MOULD INTO GOLD!

After the Russian ticket was apparently proved to be a forgery, young Charlie Bucket, who was a desolate, unfortunate boy, joined Wonka's gargantuan competition, when he found the fifth and final key to the idolized chocolate factory at last. Last night, Bucket of Luck was reported to have bought two chocolate bars (his fourth Wonka Bar in total), one of which had the treasured ticket in, following finding a single fifty-penny piece on the floor, that was shrouded with ice and snow.

Naturally, the ill-fated, poignant boy lives in a one storey rundown hut in the centre of London, where living conditions are meagre and frigid. Subsequent to Charlie's Dad, who told us, "I'm so happy for my dear Charlie", losing his job at the local toothpaste factory, "Glossy Dentz Inc.", the rich believe the sob-story for once, and are rolling in small donations! One unidentified wealthy man told the press that he thought that the poor kid was lying and that nobody should donate. The lucky London family will be visiting the legendary factory later tomorrow.

Quietly clutching the misty coin, the pessimistic boy was reported to have rushed to the corner shop, beaming from ear to ear, hurriedly cramming into the queue. He was going to get it this time!

After trying many times, unsuccessfully, Charlie's hope had diminished to a dwindling spark, and had some third-time luck to gain a shimmering ticket, especially as it was the last. The first time he tasted the delicious, melt-in-the-mouth sensation of a Wonka Bar was his birthday, where he got one as his only birthday present. Now, Charlie has apparently raced on a direct course home bearing the Golden Ticket and after passing on the news, Grandpa Joe (as told by an anonymous bystander) yelled, "Yippee!" and reportedly performed a small jig.

At long last, the immense competition comes to a stop, due to all of the tickets being found by Veruca Salt, Mike Teevee, Augustus Gloop, Violet Beauregard, and, finally, Charlie Bucket. Now what will come of their fate as they prepare to enter the titanic factory? Who will win the apparent prize? Fortuitously, we will find out soon...

Charlie Bucket and the other ticket holders