

CHARLIE BUCKET WON A GREAT GOLDEN TICKET.

As Willy Wonka's competition comes to an end, Charlie a poor young London boy, found the last golden winning ticket. Only hours ago Charlie bucket was walking down an alleyway when he found a dollar note, poking out from the snow. This was his last chance.

Charlie Bucket is a teenage boy who comes from a poor family that lives in London. In his one bed roomed house he has got a caring mom and dad and loving grandparents who all share a double bed while him and his parents sleep in the loft on the floor.

Minutes after he found the ticket Charlie sprinted to the shops, despite the fact it was slippery he asked the shop keeper for a double chocolate scrunches bar. He waited. He stared. As he opened the bar, he licked his lips with excitement, tearing it slowly it was a shiny golden winning ticket that he had never thought he would get. The kind poor boy (Charlie) who was rapidly running, while holding as tight as he could to the golden shiny ticket, sprinted back to his house to show his family what he had got.

When Charlie found the golden ticket.

Exhausted the friendless boy rode his three wheeled bicycle until he saw a crumpled dollar note on the snowy floor so excitedly he rushed to the shop to buy a Willy Wonka chocolate bar. "It's a golden ticket in my shop too. RUN home and don't stop for anyone," reported the shop keeper. He didn't. His family, overjoyed at his good fortune can't believe poor Charlie will get this once in a life time opportunity.

Tomorrow, the five lucky winners will be going to the legendary factory meeting Mr Willy Wonka and learning the secrets of the wonderful chocolate factory!
