

Last scrumptious golden ticket found

On the 31st of January in London a young boy named Charlie Bucket had set out, to the street and in the corner of his eye he saw it one pound he picked it up and rapidly ran to the nearest spar and asked for a wonkas whipple fudge mellow delight, slowly opened the bar Charlie shuffled out something gold ! It was the last golden ticket to go to wonkas factory. Everyone in the shop were trying to persuade him to sell it to them but the till man said “run home don’t sell it to anyone” Charlie replied “thank you”

The first winner to find the golden ticket was Augustus Gloop in Germany in a place called Düsseldorf his mom said “it was imposible for him not to find a golden ticket he eats hundreds of wonkas whipple fudge mellow delight a day”. The next ticket winner has gone to a “selfish BRATT” called Veruca Salt who found this by convincing her dad to tell his workers to stop shelling peanuts and start opening wonkas chocolate bars. Surprisingly in two days she had found the golden ticket. Violet Beauregard winning the third. Mike Teeve winning the fourth and Charlie Bucket winning the last ticket by a fluke.

Charles Families reaction was a quick shock “yepe” his granddad shouted whilst doing tap dancing. His granddad gave the ticket to his mom and dad and read it how will take him his mom said, granddad volunteered and his mom and dad said that granddad new a lot so his granddad took him.

Eventually the hunt is over with the Veruca Salt, Augustus Gloop, Violet Beauregard, Mike Teeve and Charlie Bucket.

Reported By Mark canning
and Andrew Mackey

Charlie Bucket winning the ticket in the shop .